For more than 5,000 years, since the beginnings of the first agrarian empires, humans have used elaborate credit systems to Debt: The First 5,000 Years is a book by anthropologist David Graeber published in 2011. It explores the historical relationship of debt with social institutions such as barter, marriage, friendship, slavery, law, religion, war and government. It draws on the history and anthropology of a number of civilizations, large and small, from the first known records of debt from Sumer in Debt: The First 5,000 Years redeems the social sciences. Not As a sociologist, I've been despairing of late at the paucity of imagination and theoretical innovation in social science research. Academics, perhaps because of the need to publish quickly and garner grant money, seem content to only add statistical validation to already established conclusions.

Debt: The First 5,000 Years Here anthropologist David Graeber presents a stunning reversal of conventional wisdom: he shows that before there was money, there was debt. For more than 5,000 years, since the beginnings of the first agrarian empires, humans have used elaborate credit systems to buy and sell goods—that is, long before the invention of coins or cash.

It is a magisterial and deeply scholarly history of how debt - and money - came to be what it is today, and how human relations evolved around it. Debt: The First 5000 Years covers a vast sweep of history, anthropology, and political economy, arguing not so much for a single thesis as for a braid of complementary ideas. Among them are:

I recently read Debt: the First 5000 Years by David Graeber, and it has stuck on my mind for a while. It's one of those "Everybody is wrong about X, here is what you've missed in plain sight" -type books; as Chamath would put it, "often wrong, but never in doubt." It's worth summarizing here, both because I

According to Anthropologist David Graeber, author of the new book 'Debt: The First 5000 Years', debt takes on an even larger significance when we trace its history, since this exercise allows us to gain a new and more complete understanding of economics as a whole, and our modern capitalist system in particular (not to mention several other aspects of the human condition to boot).
